

Group Pictures of Change Summary

Directions

This is best if you do it with a group. If you can't do it by yourself. (1) First, choose one of the pictures randomly from the powerpoint presentation attached to the assignment. To do this, choose a number between 1 and 10 and then select that slide. For the first picture, examine the picture and write down 10 things it tells you about change: lessons about change, truths about change, needs for successful change. Dive down deep and be creative. Don't just say – well the leaves are changing and that represents change. Example, if your picture is a group of people climbing a mountain together, the thought could be "Change is a social effort. It requires everyone to lead and everyone to follow at times. It can be dangerous, but if we follow the vision and rely on each other, we have more possibility of reaching the goal." (2) Now do the same thing for leadership instead of change using a DIFFERENT picture. Brainstorm 10 different lessons or learnings.

Group Number: _____32_____ 12:00 1:30

Present: ____Carly Steen, A.J. Gambino, Roman Ghorbani, Adrienne Chung, Pawani, Surthi_

Absent: ____Joey Proctor_____

- Be sure to submit by the deadline to get credit.

Change Picture ____Violin in fall leaves____

Leadership Picture __Sand_____

Change Picture Notes	Leadership Picture Notes
1. The dead leaves could represent ideas that we leave behind	1. The leader will always be the first one to traverse that path and leave the footprints for everyone behind them
2. The sheet of music can represent how change is interpreted differently by different people	2. We're always aiming to move forward (there's nothing behind him but footprints)
3. Some of the leaves are dead while some of the others are still pretty- this could represent different phases in change	3. A leader can be very independent (he's standing alone)
4. Fall is a season of change and change can occur in cycles	4. The sky is clear because a good leader needs to have a clear mind
5. Change is constant because the seasons are constantly changing	5. One side of the sand dune is light and one side is dark- he's walking between them and it represents balance within an organization
6. Since the violin is laying on the music that symbolizes how you should interpret change in your own way and go about it individually rather than strictly following a plan	6. There's a lot of footprints behind him- he's come a long way and is still continuing

Group Pictures of Change Summary

7. The music sheet can symbolize a new idea for change and the leaves can represent old ideas- old ways can cloud new perspectives in change	7. There are other paths but he's sticking to his own (a leader is committed to forging his own path and not just following in someone else's footsteps)
8. The music notes are all different moving pieces of the song (there's moving pieces/people in change and they're all important contributors)	8. The sand is clearly not solid- which can represent the changing conditions always happening when trying to lead
9. The violin is a product of change (similar to how we are and organizations are) because it originally came from a tree and became a violin	9. N/A- he said not to finish them due to time constraints
10. Your perception of music can change depending on the environment you're in- your perception of change can be altered depending on your environment	10. N/A

New/Important Understandings about Change and Leadership from your discoveries

Change can appear different in many different ways, it really just depends on the person to interpret it. Leadership is an act of balancing between "good" and "bad". Leadership and change are both long processes.

I didn't choose these pictures specifically to represent change or leadership. They are random pictures from the internet. What does this tell us about creativity, discovery, and learning?

You can discover new things/perspectives in anything and learn from those things. Even the most simple objects or pictures can be great symbols of change. We're very good at pattern recognition, which allows us to see things (be creative) in random pictures and interpret them in different ways. Learning can be a long process.

Group Pictures of Change Summary

--